EVERY SCHOOL HAS A HOUSE

Mapping the Nearest Historic Residential Treasure for Every School in the Los Angeles Unified School District

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE FOR "EVERY SCHOOL HAS A HOUSE"

The "Every School Has a House" initiative, developed by Friends of Residential Treasures Los Angeles (FORT: LA), aims to bridge the gap between students and the rich architectural history that exists within their local neighborhoods. This project locates the nearest historic home to every school within the Los Angeles Unified School District (LAUSD), offering students and educators a platform to explore these treasures through guided walking routes, historical insights, and thought-provoking questions.

FORT: LA's mission with this project is to foster a deeper awareness of how relevant and within reach significant architectural history is to students' daily lives. By connecting historic homes with schools, we hope to inspire students, teachers, parents, and the broader community to recognize and appreciate the beauty, meaning, and accessibility of Los Angeles' architectural heritage. We believe that this hands-on exploration will enhance students' understanding of their local environment, while instilling a sense of civic pride and engagement.

The project was made possible through data from SurveyLA, the Office of Historic Resources' comprehensive citywide survey of historic resources. Our goal is to integrate this information into school curricula, with the collaboration of educators, PTAs, principals, and other stakeholders, so that students can engage directly with their neighborhoods' historical narratives.

USER GUIDE FOR "EVERY SCHOOL HAS A HOUSE"

1. Find Your School

Schools are listed in alphabetical order. The PDF is also searchable.

2. Find Your School's Historic House

Each school within the LAUSD has been paired with a nearby historic home. The program provides a suggested walking route that students, teachers, and parents can follow to visit the house.

3. Learn and Reflect

Every page associated with a historic house includes:

- Walking Directions: A clear route from the school to the house.
- Historical Facts: Key information on why the house is considered a significant architectural or cultural landmark.
- Photo of the House: A visual reference to help students identify the historic home.
- Educational Questions: Prompts designed to encourage students to reflect on their surroundings as they walk to the house or stand in front of it. These questions may involve architecture, history, or the role of residential design in shaping communities.

4. Classroom Integration

Teachers can use these pages as part of lessons on local history, architecture, or civic engagement. The material can spark discussions on the influence of historic buildings, the role of preservation in the city, how people used to live, and how architecture connects to personal and community identity.

5. Collaboration Opportunities

We invite school administrators, educators, and PTAs to work with FORT: LA to incorporate these walking routes and historical insights into broader curricula, encouraging a hands-on approach to learning that connects the classroom to the neighborhood.

BENEFITS TO STUDENTS

- Increased Civic Awareness: Students gain an appreciation for their local history, which fosters a greater sense of belonging and pride in their communities.
- Hands-On Learning: This project encourages students to engage with history and architecture outside of the classroom, promoting experiential learning.
- Critical Thinking: The educational questions are designed to stimulate curiosity and analytical thinking, encouraging students to consider the significance of their surroundings.
- Community Engagement: By exploring local historic homes, students build connections with their neighborhood and learn the importance of preserving and respecting cultural heritage.

ACKNOWLEDGING THE ABSENCE OF COMPLETE ANSWERS: OPPORTUNITIES FOR DEEPER EXPLORATION

While "Every School Has a House" provides students and teachers with an introduction to the historic homes located near LAUSD schools, it does not aim to provide a comprehensive understanding of the full architectural, historical, or cultural significance of each property. The document serves as a starting point, offering walking routes, historical facts, and educational prompts, but there are likely to be unanswered questions or gaps in the material. For example, the architectural style of a house may be mentioned without detailed explanations, or the specific reasons for its inclusion in a historic context may not be fully explained.

Teachers are encouraged to use these gaps as educational opportunities. One approach could be to challenge students to delve deeper into the topics presented. For instance, students can research questions like, "What defines the architectural style of this house?" or "Why is this house significant in the broader context of Los Angeles history?" This kind of research will help students develop critical thinking and research skills, while also enhancing their understanding of the subject matter in a meaningful way.

To aid in this exploration, here are some recommended resources where teachers and students might begin to seek answers:

- Los Angeles Conservancy: A nonprofit dedicated to preserving the historic and cultural heritage of Los Angeles. Their website contains detailed guides on local architecture and preservation.

- SurveyLA: The comprehensive citywide survey that formed the basis for this project. SurveyLA offers extensive documentation on historic properties and architectural styles in Los Angeles.

- Los Angeles Public Library: A tremendous resource for accessing books, articles, and archives on the architectural and historical heritage of Los Angeles. The library provides both digital and in-person resources for deeper exploration.

- The Gamble House Digital Archive: An excellent resource for those interested in Arts and Crafts architecture, offering insight into one of the most significant historic houses in the city.

- The Getty Research Institute: A wealth of information on architectural styles, history, and preservation efforts, both locally and internationally.

Encouraging students to explore these resources, whether through independent research or class projects, can be a valuable extension of the "Every School Has a House" project. By engaging more deeply with the material, students can find their own answers as well as develop a richer appreciation for the history and architecture that surrounds them.

In addition to these resources, FORT: LA is exploring a future event aimed at bringing together teachers to discuss and explore how the "Every School Has a House" resource can be used in classrooms. This event would provide an opportunity for educators to share ideas, develop strategies for curriculum integration, and explore how the project can deepen students' engagement with local history and architecture. We hope this gathering will foster collaboration and further expand the educational impact of the project.

METHODOLOGY AND ONGOING EVOLUTION

The "Every School Has a House" project is based on data gathered by SurveyLA, the citywide historic resources survey conducted by the City of Los Angeles' Office of Historic Resources. SurveyLA collected this information between 2010 and 2017, documenting the city's historic assets, particularly its residential properties. While the survey provides a strong foundation, it's important to recognize that some of the houses identified at that time may have changed—whether through renovation, alteration, or in some cases, demolition—since the original photographs and data were collected.

In selecting the nearest historic house for each school, FORT: LA relied on the SurveyLA portal's data. However, this process inherently involved a degree of subjectivity. While SurveyLA provides detailed information on historically significant homes, the decision of which house to feature for each school involved weighing various factors, including proximity, architectural significance, and historical context. We aimed to choose homes that represent important aspects of each neighborhood's architectural heritage, but we recognize that other homes nearby might also hold historical or cultural value.

The subjective nature of this project is part of what makes it flexible and open to exploration. Our selections are not exhaustive, and they are based on the information available at the time of the survey. SurveyLA has identified a wide range of historic resources in each neighborhood, including homes that contribute to the overall historic character of an area but may not be officially designated as landmarks. We encourage students, educators, and the broader community to explore these homes as well, broadening their understanding of what makes a neighborhood historically significant.

We see this document as an evolving resource that will continue to grow as new information becomes available. As the city's historic landscape changes, we hope to update and refine this project. One of the core objectives of "Every School Has a House" is to spark conversation and dialogue—whether about the architecture itself, the history behind these homes, or the evolving story of the neighborhoods they reside in. We hope that this project will inspire deeper exploration and meaningful discussions that enhance students' connection to their local history and community.

ABOUT FORT: LA

Friends Of Residential Treasures: LA is an award-winning nonprofit dedicated to bringing people together by celebrating the history and influence of residential architecture. Our organization has developed four interlocking programs in pursuit of our mission: An online mapping system for self-guided tours of the exteriors of architecturally significant homes developed by experts in the field (FORT Trails); a fellowship to foster new knowledge (FORT Fellowship); a series of virtual experiences to provide interior access and understanding (FORT Frames); and an ongoing series of live and virtual educational events (FORT Gatherings). We have been covered by the LA Times, KCRW, KCAL, NBC: LA, Spectrum News, NPR, Los Angeles Magazine, Time Out Los Angeles, American Way, and other outlets. We have partnered on events with the Los Angeles Public Library, the Hollyhock House, the City of West Hollywood, the Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs, the Gamble House, Village Green, Studio 111, Pasadena Heritage, the Pasadena Museum of History, soho.home.studio, the Barndsall Art Park, the Neutra Institute for Survival Through Design, the Society of Architectural Historians, the Wolford House, and more. Our organization is the recipient of an LA Conservancy Preservation award and a California Preservation Foundation Design award. FORT's newsletter announcing its free monthly content reaches over 9,200 subscribers. Our website is www.fortla.org.

ABOUT SURVEYLA

SurveyLA, the groundbreaking citywide historic resources survey, serves as the primary tool for identifying and recording historic properties and districts in Los Angeles. The data collected from 2010 through 2017 cover over 880,000 legal parcels and nearly 500 square miles, making it the largest and first all-digital citywide historic resources survey in the nation. It was made possible through a partnership between the City of Los Angeles and the J. Paul Getty Trust. SurveyLA has since become a model for similar efforts worldwide. SurveyLA can be accessed here.

DISCLAIMER AND RISK

The information provided in FORT: LA's project "Every School Has a House" is based on data collected at the time of the original survey. Please be aware that the current status of the houses may have changed since their initial assessment, and we cannot guarantee their present condition or availability.

Additionally, the walking routes suggested to reach the houses from the schools are provided for convenience and may not represent the fastest or most efficient paths. Users are responsible for taking these trails at their own risk, and FORT: LA disclaims any liability for injuries, damages, or issues arising from their use.

We also request that you do not disturb or contact the owners of the houses featured in this project. They have not been consulted for inclusion, and their privacy should be respected.

This project is a living document, and we welcome updates and information that can help enhance its accuracy. We encourage users to provide feedback and notify us of any discrepancies to ensure the information remains as current and precise as possible.

L.A. Modernism - 1919-1980; Post-War Modernism - 1946-1976;
Mid-Century Modernism - 1945-1970;
Residential

HISTORIC HOUSE SIGNIFICANCE STATEMENT

Excellent example of Mid-Century Modernism, designed by noted architects Palmer and Krisel as part of the Corbin Palms development. Because the subdivision as a whole does not appear to meet integrity thresholds for historic district eligibility, intact individual residences were recorded as eligible for local designation for their association with this significant development and architect.
